Cochran's Divorce Reply Was Refusal to Live With Wife Made Virtually Same Answer as Graves and Terry to Paris Suit.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., July 31.—One of the busiest spots in Southampton to-day was the lawn on the place of Mr. and Mrs. George Barton French, where members of her midway committee were hard at work with brush and paint preparing the panels on compo boards which will decorate the booths and entrance to the Strand Park which will be held at Agawam Park next Friday.

For models they had huge panels painted in reds, greens and yellows by Albert Herter, who is leading the summer in East Hampton and which have been done in his boldest style, some of them suggesting the work of Whistler.

The women were covered with bangles and jewelry, and they were headed in their work by Mrs. French. Smudges of paint of different colors on hands and faces did not in the least interfere with their zeal and when the panels are placed the grounds will present an artistic appearance as each and every booth will have decorations as well as the French.

Mrs. French's aids with brush and paint were Miss Ellen Jacobson, superintendent of the Southampton Hospital, which will be the beneficiary of the fair; Miss Dorothy Day and Miss Adelaide Stemm, also of the hospital; Mrs. A. W. S. Cochrane; Mrs. John Sloane, who was Miss Elsie Nichol and who came over from Waterbury, Conn.; Victor Mapes, Mrs. James Fargo and her daughter, Mrs. Joseph B. Thomas; Mrs. Channing Wiley, the Misses Dolly and Kate Kuhn, Mrs. Thomas A. Howell, Doris, Mrs. William C. Howell, Corrigan. The masculine aids who mixed paints as well as applying them to the boards were Signor Guido Sabetta of the Italian Embassy, Dr. Frederick N. Wilson, Messrs. Carroll Thomas and Nicholas Biddle.

Mrs. David Hetler is chairman of the East Hampton committee assisting Mr. Edmond O'Brien at the dance pavilion for the street fair at Southampton. Among the girls on the committee are the Misses Vera Bloodgood, Maude V. Burnside, Margaret Hollister, Helen Terry's Reply to Suit.

In the Terry case James Terry, when he was called before court last February to make official reply to his wife's demand for the resumption of marital relations, declared: "It is useless to insist and I shall never return. I consider that I am no longer her husband."

Now, in the divorce suit, Terry's declaration is: "It is useless to insist and I shall never return. I consider that I am no longer her husband."

The popular belief that the decree makes definite financial provision for Mrs. Gama Walska, proves to be unfounded. The court merely appoints Judge Thoreau, one of the trial judges, to supervise the liquidation of the couple's financial differences, but that is considered a mere formality.

Inasmuch as the ceremony in September, 1920, was performed without a marriage contract, each is legally entitled to whatever property was owned by either at the time and an equal division of all accruing profits. But it is understood, even in judicial circles, that this was to have been superseded by a private financial arrangement whereby Mr. Cochran was to transfer to his wife the management of the family property and the residence in the Rue de Lubek.

All that now remains to be done for the satisfaction of French justice is the filing of a certificate by Judge Thoreau showing that both parties are satisfied with the settlements, and this formality will be accomplished before the courts resume in October. Under the decree Mrs. Walska apparently is authorized to maintain her legal home in Paris, if she so desires; but as her suit for divorce was filed in her maiden name—Puzac—it is more likely that she will adopt that name.

Custody of Graves Children.

Almost rivaling the Cochran-Walska sensation is that of the Graves divorce. Although the decree was granted to Mr. Graves, the custody of the children will be given to Mrs. Graves. The court ruled that she was to have possession of the minor children except during the months of June, July, August and September of each year, and also excepting Saturdays and Sundays in the other months. That amounts virtually to control being given to the father, as during the periods not covered by the award to the mother, the children will be in school. While they are attending school, the decree provides that Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter vacations must be divided equally between the parents.

The evidence shows that on June 9 Mrs. Graves offered to forget all that had passed if Mr. Graves would return as her husband, but this was flatly refused.

In the Terry case Mrs. Terry (nee Van Wazeham) insisted that she constantly pleaded with her husband to return to her, but he would not. The court immediately granted her 1,000 francs a month, with permission to apply for more if it were necessary, as well as the payment of legal costs. This is a peculiar deviation from the usual procedure where American divorces in Paris are concerned, as ordinarily financial settlements are not entered into, but left to private accord in the presence of lawyers.

It was learned that a divorce has been effective since Saturday in favor of Marie Quinn (nee O'Connor) against Louis Quinn, who married her in New York after a month's sojourn there.

Mrs. Amos Lawrence Hopkins of Boston has returned to her villa in Williams-town for the Institute of Politics.

Ratified Mandate Hailed by Zionists at Meeting Here Final Step in Providing Homeland Is Celebrated at the Town Hall.

Several thousand Zionists celebrated ratification of the mandate over Palestine for creation of a national Jewish homeland at a meeting at Town Hall last night under the auspices of the Zionist Organization of America. Jewish leaders were extolled as well as statements of various nations that lent influence to the Palestine plan.

Messiah, President Harding, Woodrow Wilson, Henry Cabot Lodge and others expressing wishes for success of the cause were read, and the greatest enthusiasm was evoked by the mention of the name of Earl Balfour and Chaim Weizmann, head of the World Zionist Organization.

"We begin the writing of a new volume of Jewish history," said Louis Lipsey, chairman of the organization. "It is a volume that opens with the finest hopes. It tells of a people who, after centuries of travail, have found a safe haven in the old home from which they were driven."

"Unrecognized except for persecution, treated with contempt and hatred, with scorn and derision, the Jewish people, who have passed through pages of history bearing the burden of life with amazing endurance and tenacity, from now on and forever stand as a people recognized by international law, with our historic right to the ancient homeland acknowledged by the parliament of the world."

"The recognition comes at a time when a large segment of our people are suffering hunger, privation, loss of local status and association. It is the promise fulfilled. It means the beginning of a new era of Jewish life, of new strength and new opportunities for self-expression under free conditions. We owe much to the lofty idealism and we owe much to the noble spirit of President Harding, whose words and deeds have aided us during a difficult period."

"Praise be bestowed by other speakers on the Jewish people, who have passed through pages of history bearing the burden of life with amazing endurance and tenacity, from now on and forever stand as a people recognized by international law, with our historic right to the ancient homeland acknowledged by the parliament of the world."
